ABOUT CLUJ-NAPOCA

The town's history dates back to ancient times. The settlement was elevated to municipality during the reign of Emperor Hadrian (AD 117 – 138) under the name of Municipium Aelium Hadrianum Napoca and later to colony, around AD 180. The first documentary record of the city goes back to 1173 and refers to the settlement as Clus (in Latin “surrounded by hills”). Other names it had were Kolozsvár (in Hungarian) and Klausenburg (in German); the later was given after the Saxon colonists who settled in the City of Cluj in the time of Stephen V of Hungary. Its first Romanian name was Clus (often written Klus), later on Cluj, which in 1974 was changed to Cluj-Napoca. (source: <http://www.visitclujnapoca.ro/en/despre-cluj/istoria-cluj-ului>)

Ever since it was put on the map, the city has been home of different ethnic groups. At present, out of the over 300.000 inhabitants about 80% are Romanians, 16% Hungarians and around 4% belong to other ethnic minorities. Around 80.000 students from all over the world study and live in Cluj-Napoca, raising the cultural diversity of its population.

Cluj reunites different architectural styles, from medieval to contemporary ones, and it hosts a great variety of tourist attractions. See more about places to visit at <http://www.visitclujnapoca.ro/en/attractii-turistice/trasee-turistice/>.
