description of terrain	The "Ringkogel" is a little articulated mountain which has relatively steep slopes on all sides. At the highest point you will find the "Ringwarte". The southern area is somewhat flatter and is lined with some small granite stones, rocks and channels. On the steeper north side there are some stone fields and small paths. On the northern edge lies a deep moat with many rock formations. Larger paths are scarce. The runability is good to very good. There are only a few areas with thickets and undergrowth. Partly there are areas with many channels and gentle troughs.
